CA Communities

collaborate, learn, and network with CA Communities

“The CA User Communities are a great resource for help and information to get the most value from our products and to be a part of the future of the products.”

Michiel Helder, President, eHealth/Spectrum Global
User Community

“CA User Communities are an invaluable way for global users to collaborate with one another. CA Technologies staff also regularly respond to discussion threads and make relevant presentations during user community meetings.”

Darrell Sandefur,
President, Wily Global
User Community

Share ideas, tips, information and insights with more than 20,000 business peers and CA Technologies experts with CA Communities.

Maximize your software investments by networking with a community of expertise.

Manage your business more effectively

Choose from global technical and business communities that can help you do your job and manage your business more effectively. Built for information sharing and peer-to-peer exchanges, ca.com/communities enables community members to post to message boards, comment on blogs and share documents.

You can:

- Maximize the benefits of your product implementation with best practice guidance shared by peers with similar business requirements
- Improve the effectiveness of your staff and CA Technologies solution by participating in product presentations and training that provide strategic and tactical product information
- Provide feedback on new product releases to voice your business requirements

What you get

- A “My CA” profile that enables you to connect with friends and colleagues, create a blog, post to your wall, share useful links, hold discussions and join multiple user communities
- Message boards that support tagging, posting attachments, a powerful search engine, RSS notifications, profile preferences, and private messaging
- Regular webcasts by subject matter experts, focused on specific CA Technologies solution areas and topics of interest to the user community

“CA User Communities are the best way to keep up with what is happening both from a product and technology perspective. They give you direct contact to development staff and industry leaders in the field. At this point where training budgets are being cut or eliminated, user communities provide a free way of keeping current and receiving relevant and timely training.”

Dan Dechichio, Secretary,
Modeling Global User
Community and Regional User Group President

- The ability to influence product roadmaps by voting for product enhancements that are important to you
- Regional user groups that are a subset of global user communities and foster face-to-face peer networking focused on specific CA Technologies products or solution areas
- CA Technologies beta programs and alpha testing opportunities (under NDA) provide opportunities for in depth collaboration with CA Development teams
